OR FRIENDLY COUNSEL
By Polly Poynter

The Old, Old Question.

Dear Miss Poynter:

I am a young lady 20 years of age. I have known a young man for about six months, although he calls on me twice a week. I will go out with another young man whom I know. I tell him and he thinks that I ought not to go with anyone but him. I said that unless a girl were engaged she could go with whom she pleased, but he does not agree with me. Please let me know if I am right or is he. Thanking you I remain, do so has absolutely no right to even suggest that she devote herself wholly to him.
BLUE EYES.

Meeting on the Corner.

Dear Miss Poynter:

I met a young man a few weeks ago, and since then he has invited me out twice. I accepted the invitation and told him to call for me, but he said: "No, I will wait for you on the corner." I did not think this was right, so I refused to go out with him. Was that the proper thing to do?
A YOUNG GIRL.

Yes, Young Girl, that was certainly the proper thing to do. If all girls followed your example they would be much happier. Never go out with a man who has not called at your home and been presented to your parents or the friends with whom you live. Men will respect you more when they know that you show your parents the courtesy of presenting all your acquaintances to them.

NAUGHTY DRESS.

Indeed, 'tis very lopsided. There is, indeed, a one-sleeved coat. Some dresses appear to have but one side. Two revers are by no means a necessity. Hats and various garments are trimmed on one side only. Little one-sided, bunchy effects are seen, too, in hat trimmings, sashes and other items.

STRAWBERRY DESSERTS.

Strawberries in a box (fraises en boîtes) is a way in which the French love to serve the ever-delicious and beautiful strawberry—would that it gave us its delicious fruits for a longer period. For the boîtes, make a dough as for short-cake or rich sponge-cake and bake it in a round pan. When browned cut a round out of the top and remove the inside. Fill with large, well-sweetened berries and put on the cover and, lastly, put powdered sugar over all.

In serving, slice through the whole and take out wedge-shaped pieces. Pass a bowl of frozen cream with the strawberries.

Fraises Monte Carlo.

Make a strawberry ice first by mashing and straining enough fruit to make a quart of juice, adding a pound and a half of sugar. Cut in halves a quart of berries, and cover with half a pound of sugar and a tablespoonful of lemon juice. When the strawberry juice is half frozen turn in these berries and freeze.

Fraises Wiesbaden.

For this form little individual molds of sweet, plain jelly; fill with halved and hulled strawberries and chill. When ready to serve pour over each mold some raspberry syrup and a few drops of Maraschino or Kirsch.

Fraises Ecrasées.

To make this dish first lay some halved Savoy biscuits crosswise on plates; on top pile whipped cream flavored and colored with a little sweet strawberry juice. Decorate with hulled strawberries.

William P. Clyde, Jr., to Wed English Girl

Miss Taylor is well-known socially in New York. She has only recently returned to her home in England. Mr. Clyde is a Yale graduate and belongs to the well-known family of steamship owners.

"I would not change my LAUTER Piano for any other under any circumstances"—are the words of one professional pianist. She has had a LAUTER Piano in her home for eight or nine years.

The LAUTER Piano is made to meet the requirements of those who appreciate a fine instrument. A better is not to be had.

UNCLE JACK'S PUZZLES—NO. 1041.

WHAT WAS THIS MAN'S NAME?

HERE is a person you no doubt have all read about. He is the hero of a story of great charm to children. We see him here in the Treasure Cave with his wonderful lamp. Can you find the letters hidden in the picture and arrange them in their proper order to get his name? If you find the answer fill out the coupon below and send it to Uncle Jack, the STAR, Newark, N. J.

The two girls and the two boys who send in the nearest correct answers to this puzzle can have their choice of a baseball, a box of paints, a good book, a penknife or any one of several very fascinating games. If the name is not written plainly the answer will be rejected. Uncle Jack will publish the picture of any prize-winner who cares to send him a photograph. Tiny pictures cannot be used. The prize-winners will please write to Uncle Jack, telling him how they like their awards.

FASHION TALKS

By May Manton

A PRETTY FROCK OF EMBROIDERED MUSLIN.

Dotted muslins always make pretty dresses for little girls. This one includes the bretelles that are so generally becoming. It can be made with square neck and short sleeves, as illustrated, or with high neck and long sleeves. The skirt consists of two straight flounces, one of which is attached to the gored foundation and the other which is arranged over it, consequently the model is a good one for flouncings and other bordered materials as well as for plain. For a simpler frock, bordered batiste or dimity would be pretty, and such material makes its own trimming. For a still more elaborate dress flouncing of embroidered white batiste will be found charming. Whatever material is used the lines of the frock remain the same pretty attractive ones. At the waist can be worn such a draped belt as the one illustrated, or a sash bowed at the back or at the side, or the dress can be finished with a simple plain belt, just as liked.

For a girl 10 years of age will be required 4 1/2 yards of material 27, 4 yards 36 or 3 1/2 yards 44 inches wide with 5 yards of banding and 4 yards of edging to make as shown in the front view, 5 1/2 yards of flouncing 15 inches wide, with 2 yards of plain material 27 or 1 1/2 yards 36 inches wide to make as shown in back view.

A May Manton pattern, No. 7005, in sizes for girls of 8, 10 and 12 years of age, will be mailed to any address by the fashion department of this paper on receipt of ten cents.

Up-to-Date News of the Woman's World

MISS REQUA LOSES LONG SCHOOL FIGHT.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Mary Augusta Requa, who was director of physical training in the Board of Education in Manhattan and the Bronx for six years until her place was abolished in 1903 and Dr. Luther H. Gulick was appointed director of physical training for the greater city, lost yesterday her fight of eight years for reinstatement when the Appellate Division denied her application for a writ of mandamus against the board.

ALICE THAW BUYS WASHINGTON HOME.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—It is reported that the Countess of Yarmouth, formerly Miss Alice Thaw, has purchased for $50,000 the home here of the late Chief Justice Fuller, and will come here as a permanent resident. The countess formerly was a resident of Washington for a part of each year. With her mother, Mrs. William Thaw, she lived opposite Lafayette Park. It was the scene of courtship with the Earl of Yarmouth.

NOTED ILLUSTRATOR WEDS W. HOWARD DRAYTON.

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—Mrs. Grace Gebbie Wiedersheim, the noted illustrator, and W. Howard Drayton, 35, were married yesterday at Chester, Pa. Immediately after the ceremony the couple left for New York, where they will make their home.

BIRD PROTECTOR MISSES HER MARK.

Her love for birds came near getting Mrs. Antoinette Perkins, an elderly widow of Anderson street, Hackensack, in serious trouble yesterday. Three bullets, which she fired from a revolver at a cat which was killing a robin on her lawn, came within an ace of killing three persons.

One bullet crashed through the wall of Wallace Burnham's home in Maple street, 300 feet distant, and passed over the dining-table.

The others whistled past the heads of two boys who were walking past Mrs. Perkins' home.

MRS. CHAMP CLARK ON EULOGY CRUSADE.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 24.—Mrs. Champ Clark, wife of the Speaker of the House, is trying to introduce a reform in connection with Congressional eulogies. She has personally requested as many members of the House as she has been able to find to be present tomorrow, when twenty members will deliver eulogies on the late Senator Daniel of Virginia.

Of late years Sundays or days when there has been no business to transact have been set aside for eulogies, and the custom has been for nobody to attend except the speakers. The galleries are usually empty except for sorrowing relatives of the dead statesmen. Mrs. Clark says that in the old days eulogies were listened to by the whole House and the galleries were crowded.

Correspondents are requested not to send stamps for personal replies. Miss Doon's mail is too heavy to permit her to write private letters. Letters written on both sides of paper will not be considered. For advice in affairs of the heart address Miss Polly Poynter, who will have entire charge of that department in the future.

Ink Stains.

Dear Miss Doon: Kindly tell me how I can get ink spots out of tan linen and also out of a blue skirt. Kindly let me know as soon as you can. I am very careless and get ink over everything. In future I will be more careful. Have tried several things in vain. Thanking you in advance, I remain,
A CONSTANT STAR READER.

I am glad to hear that you have determined to be more careful, as ink is a very hard stain to remove without taking the color out of the garment. Try soaking the stained portion in buttermilk over night and washing it out well in the morning. A correspondent who signed himself X. Y. Z. recently recommended hydrogen peroxide as an excellent remedy for ink stains. You might try it under the hem of the blue skirt, to be sure that it does not take the color out.

Varied Ambitions.

Dear Miss Doon: If you will give me a little of your advice and a little of your help you will surely help a discouraged girl. I am a girl of 18 and looking for a position. I am very anxious to go on the stage. I would like to be an employee of the Public Service Company. Where do you apply for such a position? How would a trained nurse be? I would like to be up at the insane asylum as nurse. If you will help me, Miss Doon, advise me what I can do. I will thank you with all my heart. I am losing courage, as I must pay board and don't know what to do with myself. You have helped others lots of times, and you can help me with this. Thanking you once more,
POOR GIRL BEATRICE.

Your ambitions are rather diversified. Why don't you determine what line of work you desire to follow and bend all your energies toward securing a position in that line. You know what they say about a "jack of all trades."

Bridegroom's Attire.

Dear Miss Doon: Kindly answer the following questions in the Newark STAR: Would it be proper for a bridegroom to wear a tuxedo at a small home wedding which is to take place at noon? If so kindly describe in detail the rest of the groom's attire. If not, what is the proper costume for such an event? Yours respectfully,
J. A. S.

No, it would not be proper for a bridegroom to wear a tuxedo at a noon wedding. The proper costume is a frock coat, gray striped trousers, plain white stiff-bosom shirt, small wing collar with round edges, pearl gray ascot or four-in-hand tie, pearl gray suede gloves, patent leather buttons shoes with kid tops and a small white boutonniere.

Coronation Souvenirs

SOUVENIRS and mementos of the coronation surpassed in interest and variety those that were produced for either Queen Victoria's diamond jubilee or for the crowning of the late king. It is not as modern a method of celebrating a great historical event as is sometimes supposed. Collectors are well aware that now and again in the disposal of the effects of an old country house cups and jugs brought out to commemorate Nelson's victories or Waterloo, faded keepsakes of Queen Victoria's accession or coronation come to light. The coronation was remarkable for the tasteful and permanent souvenirs that were prepared. Perhaps the most striking of these was the coronation medal issued by a well-known London firm of jewelers. The medals were made in various sizes and qualities, from white metal to solid 18-karat gold. They were quite works of art, the obverse presenting finely-modeled crowned portraits of their majesties, King George V. and Queen Mary, in their royal robes and jeweled decorations, dividing the legend, "George V.—Mary." Souvenirs in Porcelain. One example in porcelain was in real Staffordshire china with delicately-painted miniatures of their majesties in a frame work surmounted by the crown. Around the beaker there was a festoon of oak, with loops at intervals, including the English rose, and inscribed with the names of the Dominions and India. At the back was a scroll of Adam design, with the king's name and the date. For Masculine Use. In the Lambeth ware very effective use was made of the king's portrait in naval uniform on tobacco jars. A happy expression was caught, and these will assuredly be seen in many a smoking-room and study. Here, too, were prepared the first souvenirs of the Prince of Wales in handsome jugs and three-handled cups, with his royal highness's portrait in front, and at the back a view of Carnarvon castle, which is to be the scene of the investiture in July.
